1. What's your dream project?

Having my own TV show where I get to act/create and work with a team of my favourite people everyday making something fun/funny.

2. The biopic of your life is coming out, what are you most worried about?

My fashion choices in the 80's. I still can't wear turquoise.

3. If you weren't doing this for a living, what would you be doing?

Tough. I'm not passionate about math and sciences so by default, I would always want to do something in the arts, working with people and making them laugh. Maybe running my own comedy theatre-but someone would have to do box office.

4. What's one thing that gets under your skin?

Close minded people...people that only see how things won't work, not how things could work.

5. What is your secret to balancing work and life?

Not sure I've got one of those "secrets." I try to organize weekly creative outings with my husband to shake it up. Whether it's coffee with a friend or getting together with some pals and getting Bob Ross to teach us how to paint - something that gets me away from my computer.
